

Gone to Green

Judy Christie

Can a big-city journalist change a small southern town... or will the townspeople change her forever?

Lois Barker trades her corporate life at a large paper in the Midwest for the ownership of The Green News-Item, a twice-weekly newspaper in rural North Louisiana. As the not-so-proud new owner, Lois is obliged to keep the paper for at least a year, despite her doubts and fears.

When she pulls into Green on New Year's Day, her expectation of a charming little town full of friendly people is shattered. Instead, she must battle prejudice and financial corruption, while making friends and enemies with a host of fascinating characters who will change her life. As challenges unfold, her year in Green results in a newfound faith and unexpected blessings.

Judy Christie left the daily news business to open her consulting firm that works with individuals, churches, and businesses on strategies for meaningful life and work. She is the author of the Hurry Less, Worry Less series and Goodbye, Murphy's Law. Judy and her husband live in Northwest Louisiana. This is her debut novel.
